"The Editor's Hour"

As of this writing Jim Stekl has resigned as President of IBS. Bob White will move into the position with a new First Vice President to be appointed by the executive board.

This action will also leave a vacancy on the IBS measuring committee. Additionally, Mr. Clyde Hart indicates that he would like to pass his role on the measuring committee along to someone else since he has done that chore for many years.

The present activity in this area is to obtain a committee for the measuring task. It is hoped that we can find 3 men in a relatively small area so that the long waits and many miles which were previously necessary to transfer targets can be eliminated. It appears that this will be possible as of this writing. (See President's Message in this issue for information. R.R.M.)

"Benchrest 79" is approaching reality and will be in session as you read this. We have had an excellent response and the staff has done a fine job. If the school is as informative and as much fun as the organization and preparation has been we will have fun and learn a lot. Perhaps shooter interest will dictate another school next summer.

BR cases are a constant question wherever I go this summer. I am sure that there are many owners just waiting for good brass so that they can put these rifles into competition. A phone call to Howard Meadows (6,26,79) indicated that brass will be on hand by the time that you read this. Don't hold me to this as we all know the industrial situation at this time, but Howard feels that the delivery date is close at hand.

* * *

In the rumor department it has been called to my attention that J-4 may be making a run of good 25 caliber jackets. I know of a lot of 25 caliber bullet making dies which are just crying for good jackets. Is this the answer to their prayers? Only time will tell.

Don't forget the Heavy Bench Championship to be held at the South Creek Rod & Gun Club on September 8 & 9. There are big plans underfoot for prizes and activity. Why not break out that Heavy and come on out for a really good time. Many others will be there.

Please let us know, well in advance, what your new address will be. Send your old address too — even better, enclose the address label from a recent issue. Benchrest Down Under — The Australian Scene

Ann Brummell
24 Septimus Avenue
Punchbowl, N.S.W.
Australia 2196

This column is not totally benchrest but on the higher plain — firearms ownership, which effects everyone including the group shooters.

Australia, as all will be aware, is comprised of seven states (one attaining statehood on 1/7/78) and one territory. As a consequence it has the same number of Firearm Acts, administered by each elected government of many political persuasions. Over the past ten years our Association (S.S.A.A.) has stood out as the strong voice in this area and is the only shooting organization willing to go into battle for firearms owners in general, not just for those who are competition orientated.

In Tasmania, Queensland, New South Wales and Victoria there are equitable laws that do not discriminate against the law abiding citizen who wishes to own a firearm with New South Wales and Victoria having a system of licensing the shooter not his arms.

The newest state in Australia is Northern Territory and with statehood they have earned the right to frame their own laws. Firearms is one of the first under review. The National body of S.S.A.A. is taking a keen interest in the review and will be shortly presenting submissions on the subject as the current law dealing with firearms is very restrictive and discriminatory. In the Australian Capitol Territory the long arm laws are under review and the state body in Canberra is monitoring the situation.

This leaves Western Australia and South Australia. In Western Australia a virtual police state situation exists where one has to ask and apply correctly to be permitted to own a firearm. If permission is granted registration of every arm is mandatory. To illustrate the situation I will use Kevin Caimanos who is not only a respected and law abiding citizen but State President of our S.S.A.A. Kevin shoots mainly Lever Action and in 1977, while on the competition trail, shot in the New South Wales championships. He also shot in Queensland. Kevin shot particularly well and won the New South Wales Championship, his trophy a Lever Action rifle — all very fine unless you are a resident of Western Australia. During the remainder of 1977 and for the best part of 1978, Kevin sought permission to own and register his trophy but because it was a rifle, and he had already been given permission to own and register a couple of others, the answer was a resounding NO. The rifle continued to sit unused and securely locked away in the dealers books. Kevin tired of being treated like a criminal and took his case to a court of law and this week the magistrate handed down his decision. Kevin has won his case and is now permitted to own, register and use his trophy (in that order). During the verdict the magistrate indicated that the authorities had presented an empty bag in argument and submission against Kevin's case. These laws were well in force for the recently concluded 1979 Nationals with no concessions given to visiting competitors. Interstate visitors did not have to say please but they had to register all their arms with the police in Western Australia via an identification from their home branch at least a fortnight before the shoots — too bad if you made up your mind to attend at the last moment and hopped a plane.

In South Australia registration of the arm prevails and an updated review is well advanced. If enacted we will see an even more distasteful registration system in operation with the right of ownership placed entirely in the hands of the police, with a registration system that will offer no benefit for the reduction of crime but will serve as a persecution to the law abiding gun owner. South Australian law does, however, make concessions for visiting shooters — it is not necessary to register arms providing you do not stay more than 14 days within their borders after that register.

Shooters in Australia are used as a political football and we are tired of walking the tight rope of now you have firearms but tomorrow who knows. Every time a bank hold up occurs or a person gets shot the cry to tighten the gun laws or ban the gun blazes out across the headlines when in actual fact it is a cover up for inadequate and soft penalties for misuse.

Reference books such as "Firearms Control" by Greenwood and "Gun Control" by Kukla are excellent works on the subject and provide documented proof that firearms registration achieves no benefits except to create a black market pool of arms which always seems to be readily available to criminals.

The theme of disarm the populace in the interest of law and order is so Communist inspired that it is crimson not pink. Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin all preached the same doctrine and this can be seen in any reference works on any of the three. With the disarm thinking always lurking around in the background no state or country, even those with fair and equitable laws, can relax for a moment, constant monitoring is a necessity and a fact of life for all firearm organizations.

The various state bodies of S.S.A.A. spend thousands of dollars every year on the subject and to my mind it is worth every cent as I've never seen or met a shooter who would prefer to play marbles or hunt with stones.

Until next time.

A Bullet Lubricant Melting Stove

By Guy Lautrad

2570 Rosebery Avenue
West Vancouver, B.C.
Canada, V7V 2Z9

Lacking a lubricator/sizer machine, I dip my cast bullets individually in melted lube, then press a headless cartridge case over each bullet to remove excess lube.

Over the years I have employed several methods of melting wax based bullet lubes. Among them, and probably the least desirable, were candles and alcohol lamps. These open flame heat sources are a definite fire hazard, and I had quite a scare one day when one of my short candle "stoves", left unattended for no more than two minutes, nearly set my back stairs afire. A few minutes more and that's exactly what would have happened, if nothing worse.

A friend decided he'd better protect me from myself. He was, at the time, taking a night school course in brazing techniques. He removed the back of his wife's washing machine and from it fabricated the neat little electric stove shown here.

The accompanying drawings show how the stove is made. Sheet metal is recommended, copper or aluminum being good for the tray and "heat director". Galvanized sheet iron or other available material could be used for the outer casing. Even "hardware cloth" could be used. Soldering, brazing, pop riveting, or other construction can be used—just whatever is convenient for the individual builder. Electrically, nothing could be simpler—no switch is needed; when the cord is plugged in, the stove is on.

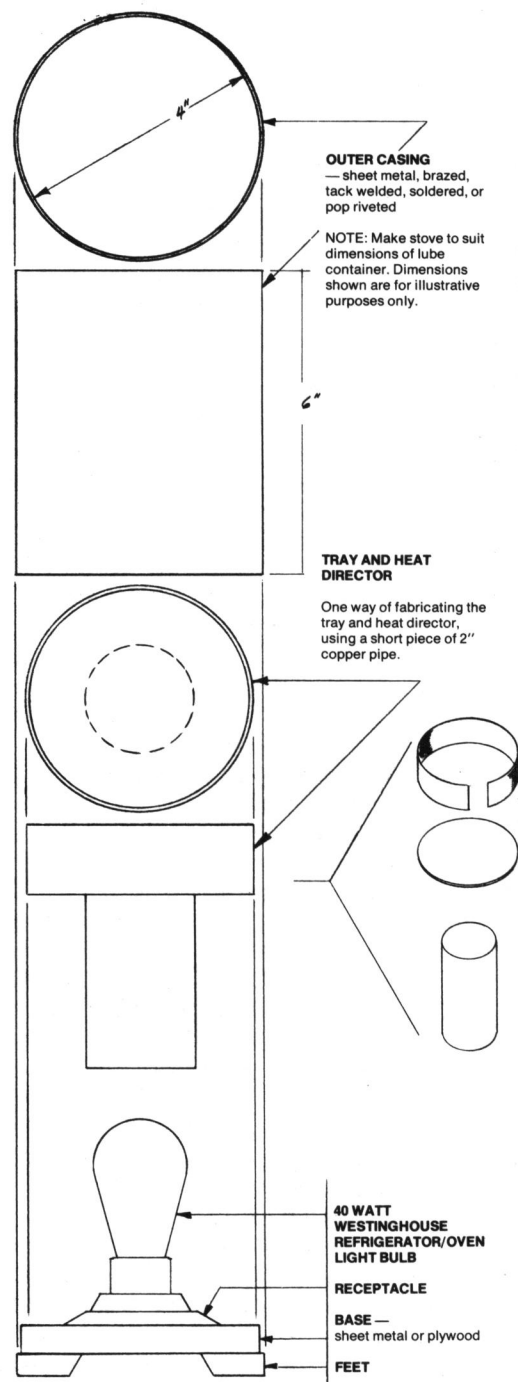

A 35 mm bulk film container makes an ideal "frying pan" for the lube. These cans are large enough to hold a good supply of lube, and they have a snug fitting lid which helps keep the dust out between lubing sessions. Such containers could probably be located locally from a photographic supply house, a large engineering firm or microfilm service company. Look in the Yellow pages and ask the photography stores who buys bulk film—one more phone call could fix you up with a few cans.

The stove's element is nothing more than a 40 watt oven or refrigerator light bulb. I doubted the ability of such a small bulb to melt a cake of lube, but my pal assured me it would do so with no trouble. He was right. Melting time for a cake containing 3 sticks of Alox is about one hour. Not fast, but no problem: I just plug in the stove that much in advance of when I'll want to use it. Leaving the lid on the lube can speeds melting and I sometimes cover the stove with a folded bath towel to further hurry things along—try that with a candle sometime! The best thing about this little stove is that it is safe—there is no open flame, and it cannot overheat, even if you inadvertently leave it on for several hours.

THE ASSEMBLED STOVE

The author's electric Lube Melting Stove, a bulk film can containing Alox, and an alcohol lamp previously used for lube melting. Latter's open flame is a fire hazard in the workshop, and its fuel is poisonous. The electric stove eliminates these hazards.

- "Shooter's News," the Chronical of North American Shooting, had its face lifted this month with a red colored masthead, a daring departure from the drab black and white. It was sort of an anniversary in that the printed magazine started in August, 1948 under the guidance of Phil Teachout. An earlier abortive start in December, 1947, Vol. 1, No. 1 quit after May, 1948 due to lack of funds. The bulletin was published initially in mimeographed form.
- Art Blensinger, our powerful bench rest competitor seized fourth place in the 1954 New York State smallbore championship matches held in Elmira, N.Y. on July 3-4, 1954. Watch Art at the bench! He usually places fourth or better at most shoots.
- A huge assortment of merchandise prizes were listed for distribution to winners at the first National Championship shoot to be held at Custer, S.D. in September.
- Mike Walker tied Crawford Hollidge's ten shot 100 yard record of .268" at the Lewistown, Pa. shoot on July 4, 1954. Mrs. Walker also demonstrated her ability to cope with conditions because she and Mike made off with most of the 100, 200 and grand agg, hardware, gifts, trophies, prizes, money, congratulations and other assorted awards.
- The .219 Donaldson was already beginning to fade as was the Douglas bench rest barrel. A Hart barrel chambered for the 222 Rem. cartridge was the "in" thing to shoot, and it was impossible to live without B+A bullet making dies.
- Ed McNally started production of his wide, stable front rest. As I remember it could be had with either a small cylindrical or a large conventional flat sand bag tray. It sold for $22.00.

- Judson, Brownell, Hankins, "Apache Jack" Williams, Hollingsworth and Harold Morgan made things interesting and instructive for all the other competitors at Buffalo, Wyo. on July 10-11, 1954.
- Mike Walker, continuing his winning streak at Wilkes Barre, Pa. on July 17-18, solidly convinced shooters that the 222 Rem. was here to stay. He won the "Was-Den" trophy, a Unertl scope and an Apex barrel. Wonder what he ever did with the barrel? Mike was

The International Corner

Lt. Col. Rick Hornbeck
International Committee

The rifles used in the first German benchrest competition reflect a wide range of interests. Note the rifles which are made in the United States.

Benchrest Is Established In West Germany

The hard work and dedication of Peter Hammerich toward formulation of a German Benchrest Association has been successful. During the later part of April, 1979 the very first benchrest match was held in southern West Germany and a national organization was formed. This was all started by Peter when he established a German Benchrest Center some months ago. The center got the word out through letters and articles in shooting publications. The effort was a total success with the first match at Munchen and a national organization was born.

The match, because of time limitations, was held to a warm-up match and three record groups. The rifles were a large cross section of the current types of rifles being used in West Germany and, to give all an equal chance, two classes were established for this first match. They would fall very close to what is accepted as Heavy Varmint and Sporter or Hunter. Targets were measured with the Sweany reticle rule and then converted to millimeters. The distance fired was 100 meters.

John R. Doherty fired the best group of the day with a .231" (5.86 mm). Rudolf Kapfelsperger posted the best aggregate with a .307" (7.80 mm). The listing of equipment is a possible problem for our German contemporaries. Due to West German law, it's possible that listing the names of the equipment used can be an indication of endorsement, thereby removing amateur status. I got the impression after talking to Peter about this that the situation is somewhat ambiguous and that further investigation will be conducted to attempt to remove any problems in the future.

The photo of the equipment fired at this first match is a cross section and the rifles that were constructed in the US can be easily picked out. These rifles, Peter reports, produced the better scores. After this first contact with benchrest equipment currently in use in nations involved in our activities it is assured that the West German gunsmithing of specialized shooting equipment will rapidly adapt to the requirements of benchrest shooting.

Affiliation with IBS had been requested and approved. Further plans are to hold a match in the central part of West Germany in an effort to attract more competitors with shorter distances to cover. This will expose others interested in this form of competition to matches and equipment. The new German Benchrest Association is adopting the classes and match rules currently used by all IBS affiliated nations which will continue the excellent standardization of equipment and rules we have had in the past. This is of prime interest to the International Committee which will shortly be adding the name of a West German competitor as affiliation is completed.

Peter Hammerich and his fellow shooters are well on the way to full-blown benchrest shooting activities. During several visits with Peter at Super Shoot VII, the enthusiasm required was very evident. With this great positive start we'll see some healthy competition coming from our German contemporaries.

6.5 INFORMATION FROM AUSTRALIA

The following information arrived the other day. It is of interest to those who follow the 6.5 bore. We are including it without comment for your enjoyment.

I presume that you keep your back issues of Precision Shooting as I want to refer to Volume 23-8 of December 1977. I was interested in your reply to a letter on page 5 — 6.5 at 300 meters.

About 5 years ago I bought, very cheaply, a 6-1/2 pound Brno Model 24 (1947 manufacture) 6.5 x 57 sporter. This rifle had fired approximately 500 rounds of factory ammunition of the 93 gr. hi-speed variety (advertised velocity 3,350 fps). This ammo was from the Czech factory POVAZSKE STROJAN; known here simply as POVA ammunition. It is of course Berdan primed, which I have no difficulty in reloading. I received about 100 rounds of this ammo with the rifle plus 300 or so of 155 gr. round nose at a much lower velocity and 300 or so of once fired cases.

The stock on this rifle is typically European and did not suit me. I did not like the set trigger either. However, the inletting was so good and it shot so well that I dared not alter it in any way. I did lower the bolt handle for scope mounting. A local gunsmith did this perfectly. The barrel is very light, 23-5/8 inches, with a 9-1/2 inch twist. It has 4 lands and a perfect .256-.264 bore which is very unusual for European barrels which are usually oversize.

I didn't expect much from this rifle in the way of accuracy because of its light barrel, stock and long throat. My first 3 shot group at 100 yards with the 93 gr. hi-speed load was a clover leaf of just under 1/2". It had to be a fluke, or so I thought at the time.

The throat is long but cone shaped. It does not cut into the grooves but runs into the lands for a beautifully smooth bullet guide. The barrel appears to have been lapped to a high finish. Way back in the American Rifleman of August 1952 a guy named Lambert of the Springfield Arsenal describes and illustrates such a throat in an article on the 25 Souper, 25-308.

Anyhow, I'll just say that this rifle was the most fascinating and efficient piece of gear I've ever used in 66 years of shooting. I say "Was" the most fascinating because recently a friend of mine shot this Brno with the 120 gr. Sierra bullet and 52 gr. of 4350 in fireformed 7 x 57 Winchester cases and 120 primers. He promptly gave me $350.00 for it, spindly barrel, worn stock and all. My financial condition would not permit me to hold on to it at that price particularly since I could keep the scope, ammo and dies.

I subsequently purchased 2 later model Brnos in 7 x 57 and 270. Both shoot extremely well but still are not the equal of another 6.5x57. I sold them too and am now firmly decided on another 6.5x57 even if I have to get it custom made.

The 6.5 x 57 is often described by American gun writers as simply the 6.5/257 Roberts which it is not. The 6.5/257, for instance, will readily chamber in a 7 x 57 rifle but a 6.5 x 57 will not.

The head to base of neck dimension for the 6.5/257 is 1.906 while the 6.5 x 57 is 1.937. These differences are only slight but preclude the chambering of a 6.5 x 57 in a 7 x 57.

I find that the 6.5 x 57, formed from 7 x 57 Winchester brass, holds 1-1/2 to 2 gr. more powder than a fired 6.5 x 55 Norma case fired in a 6.5 x 55 Schultz and Larsen. This is a small bonus here but the availability and excellence of Winchester 7 x 57 brass is a big one. Case forming is a piece of cake. Simply run a new 7 x 57 case through the 6.5 x 57 die until the neck only is sized about 1/8". Then load with 100 gr. bullets and 47 gr. of 4064. It is then a crush fit into the chamber, fireforming to perfection. It gives 3,050 fps and 1 inch, 3 shot groups in the process.

The performance of the 6.5x57 is fantastic. To me it equals the 25/06 and 270 in a much lighter and more pleasant rifle. Its throat design makes it possible to use 50 gr. of 4350 behind the Sierra 140 gr. BT and I have never experienced any pressure signs with my handloads.

On occasion, though, I have had loose primer when shooting POVA factory 93 gr. ammo in 80 to 90 degree temperatures. This ammo is obviously pretty hot for factory stuff although my chronograph tests give around 3,250 fps which is 100 fps under the claims.

I do hope that you have found all of this interesting. It is a little known and little used caliber and I really was surprised to read about it and your interest in it. Personally I had no interest in it until I got this Brno. Years ago I owned a 6.5 x 54 that was beautiful to behold—that was all. I also had a Mauser 6.5 x 54 K which is like an overgrown 25 Remington rimless. This rifle shot .260 diameter bullets out of a .263 barrel.

I have a number of 6.5 x 61 Mauser cartridges by D.W.M. which look the most interesting of all.

I have been using the Lapua 144 gr. BT bullets in my little Brno and they shoot into an inch at 200 yards with 48 gr. of 4350.

Kindest regards for 1979.

STONEWALL RIFLE & PISTOL CLUB

April 28 & 29, 1979

Va. State Varmint Championships

Stonewall hosted its second Varmint Championship on their newly rebuilt range. Stonewall was pleased to see many new faces this year with an encouraging increase in attendance.

The weather proved to be very mild during the first day of shooting with good conditions producing good aggregates. With rain and cool temperatures in the evening the wind and mirage took their toll over the 200 yard range.

Many people reported on the excellent food and lodging provided by the Old Buckhorn Inn, now in operation again.

Nearly all in attendance appreciated the fine southern hospitality shown by the club. Future matches are certain to gain in popularity as the word gets around.

President's Message

An explanation is in order for my writing of this message. Effective as of July 1, 1979 Jim Stekl has resigned the office of President of IBS. This was done because of business demands which have been placed upon him making it impossible for him to continue in this position. It is my belief that this decision was made with the best interests of IBS at heart and involved considerable thought for Jim.

As provided in our By-laws the executive board met on June 30, 1979 and, by unanimous vote of those in attendance, appointed me to fill the remainder of Jim's term as IBS President. Further actions taken at this meeting included:

1. Empowering the President to appoint an interim 1st. Vice President. This person is to be chosen from past officers of IBS and is to serve until the annual meeting in November. At this time it is expected that a special election will be held, in November, to fill the balance of the term, a one year period.

2. Increase the IBS dues by $3.00, to $13.00. This action was taken in response to a notice of a similar increase in the subscription rate for Precision Shooting Magazine.

I would like to add that I intend to work to the best of my ability to promote the objectives of IBS and to serve the membership in the most efficient manner consistent with my capabilities. I intend to soon publish a list of all committees and chairpersons so that you, the members, will know who to contact regarding your interests or concerns.

I have already accepted the resignations of Clyde Hart and Jim Stekl from the Measuring Committee. I have appointed Lloyd Richards as Chairman of that committee and added Mike Griffin to serve along with Paul Kempfer and Lloyd. Due to the close proximity of the total committee (about 30 miles apart) I now expect to see a greater speed in the measuring of potential record targets. This should result in greater efficiency and service for the membership. My personal thanks to Clyde and Jim for excellent service in the past.

In hopes of seeing and meeting with as many old and new friends as possible at the International Championships and the Annual Meeting I remain:

Yours in good shooting,

Bob White
